Tram Trekking: If you're interested in great views, history, artifacts, and the chance to see wildlife, this self-guided hike will be just right. Did we mention you only have to walk downhill? Our driver will take you to the rocky alpine top of Montana Mountain and show you the way to the lakeshore far below. Most of the hike follows the route of the world's longest gravity-powered mining tram, on historic horse-packing trails or bushwhacking as you see fit. We'll meet you at the old tram terminus on Windy Arm and feed you a hearty supper while you rest your legs.

9:00 am – 9:00 pm Suitable for some Min 2 – Max 4 persons

It's a Big Thing: A gentler option to Tram Trekking, this hike starts in a more sheltered alpine area and follows the route of Big Thing Creek to the valley floor. Our driver will show you the stone houses, mining tunnels and other features before seeing you off. The descent gives great views and the opportunity to see wildlife. When you reach the shores of Tagish Lake, you can relax while we cook dinner.

Tally-Ho, Boys: The Tally-Ho Boys were British prospectors in this area around 1906. Little of their workings remain, but the incredible scenery is a constant. Using our 4x4, we'll drive you to an alpine valley that offers a short climb to the summit of Tally-Ho Mountain, and then you're off! Descending the north side of the mountain gives great views of the surrounding ranges and the Wheaton River valley far below. We'll meet you at the riverside and enjoy a good meal.

Canyon Clamber: Did you know that goats allow you to get quite close if you are above them? This hike may give you the opportunity to find out. From the drop-off point in the alpine, you'll descend past old mining artifacts and follow the ridge above Pooly Canyon. From the right vantage point you may see The Vault, a mine deep in the bottom, with small trams crisscrossing the crevasse to the lake below. This hike requires experience, and the duration may vary with access, route conditions and your abilities. At the bottom, we'll meet you and whip up a good dinner while you put your feet up.

Hiking EXPEDITIONS — 2014

Suitability: Difficulty ranges from a reasonable downhill walk that many people could do, to scrambling on scree slopes without a marked trail. Hiking trips are self-guided. We drive you to an alpine area and provide directions, but you should have some hiking experience and ability to route-find. Hikes take place in a mountain environment, so be prepared for changing weather and conditions.

We Supply: Transportation, map, walking sticks, rain ponchos and hats, a day pack, bear spray, small first aid kit, and an FRS radio so we can check in with you. We'll pick you up and return you to Whitehorse. A packed lunch, drinks, water and supper are included.

You Supply: Suitable clothes and boots and personal items like a camera. Imagination and curiosity will keep you entertained and safe.

Small Print: We reserve the right to cancel or alter trips for your safety due to weather or other conditions. Participants must sign a waiver of liability form prior to trips or renting equipment.
